MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE.

Mayor Matthews Before Committee on Bapid Transit.

Boston, March 16. Mayor Matthews appeared before the legislative committee on rapid transit, to-day, and outlined his plan for an elevated railroad for the city. He figures it would cost the city about $11,700,000. Ex-Wurden Bice, of Maine State prison, was before the Senate Prison Investigating Committee, to-day. He criticized the system of permitting prisoners to communicate with each other. He thought the number of prisoners at Charlestown was too large and nuwledy for the force of officers there and was of the opinion that two prisons would be much better than one, though he did not helieve in a separate prison for incorrigibles, as recommended by the Governor and prison board.
"The only way to maintain discipline," said he, "is either to give the prisoners constant employment or keep them in solitary confinement. I believe the former is more humane to prisoners and more economical to the Eate."

The present unsettled state of affairs affects business, and is strenghtering the royalists in their opposition. A number of secret meetings have been held by royalists at which various measures for bettering their position have been discussed. It has been proposed that representations be made to the English government in view of the upparent apethetic action of the United States. The retention in office of A. S. Cleghorn, the father of Princess haidball, as collector of customs and several appointments have caused some dissatisfaction among some of the supporters of the government.

Walling For the Modern Woman.

Mrs. Lynn Linton, who has constituted herself the judge and censor of woman, has come forth in The Nine-teenth Century with a new grievance. It is woman as a housewife whom she holds up to public scorn this time. Homenotically to public scorn this time. Home-made bread, says the lady, is as extinct as the dodo and home cured hams as source as great anks' eggs. She laments the descented into which brewing and winemaking have fullen, forgetting that this is scarcely a theme for poetic regret, and she utters a last despairing wall beand she utters a last despairing wall because we have no longer "the pretty girls who mused in sweat security." And all through the article she takes the unique ground (for her) that women should be the playthings of love, gracions and graceful, living to please and be pleased. No thought has Mrs. Linton for those who are compelled to go out into the world to fight, and fall or stand, as the conditions shall direct.—Chicago Tribune. I then examined the crossing and found the line in good condition. A small slip had been caused by a large experient of water, but everything—so far as I could see—was in perfect order.

Throwing back the cloak which enveloped her small form, she stood before me a wiry lobking man, with piercing dark eyes. In the right hand a jeweled pisted glistened in the lamp light, and the hand that held it was as cool and steady as possible. I glanced into the small barrel of the pretty plaything and child the small barrel of the pretty plaything and around the curve was a deep crossing, and the rain must have washed down the em-bankment in time to wreck the evening express.
